

D.K.

Abram Działowski

He was a devoted activist in the Craftsmen's Union, and its Vice-Prezes.

This same gaiters-maker, from a small village near Częstochowa, already in his youth was an important member of the Social-Democratic Workers Party and was even sent, for a certain time, to the far regions of Tsarist Russia.

He represented the craftsmen on the Kehilla Council and also worked very actively for the Craftsmen's Union, especially during the elections to the Polish Sejm, as well as to local communal institutions. He also devoted much time and strength to the co-operative movement of the Jewish craftsmen.

He had the "luck" to die of natural causes but, with his sudden demise, the organised Jewish craftsmen of Częstochowa lost a loyal activist.
