

D.K.

Józef Goldberg

He was the representative of the Jewish barbers in the Craftsmen's Union. He grew together with his work in the union, earning an important political career.

For many years, Goldberg was Vice-Prezes of the union and, together with Dr Gajsler, was the representative of the craftsmen on the City Council, where he always strived to improve the Jewish craftsman's conditions. Goldberg was also the most active participant in the organisation of the craftsmen's guilds and their cooperative movement.

(Miraculously, he survived the horrors of the Second World War and travelled to his brother in Canada, where he died in 1962. Blessed be his memory!)
