

WOLBERG Stanisław Józef (1904–1939), chemical engineer, industrialist, participant in the 1939 war. He was born on 23th June 1904 in Częstochowa, the son of → Aleksander Adam and Zofia née Karpf, the cousin of → Adam Wolberg.

Wolberg graduated in chemistry from the Jagiellonian University. Together with his father, he ran the “Zawodzie” Częstochowa Dye Factory. He also owned a chemical factory in Rudniki near Częstochowa. He sat on the board of the Association of Electricity Subscribers.

He lived in Częstochowa- in the mid-1930s at ul. Sporna 10 and circa 1938 at ul. Kilińskiego 30.

He was mobilised in August 1939 and fought in the military campaign. He perished on 30th September 1939 near Lwów (according to another version, near Przemyśl).

He wife was Waclawą née Pawluk, previously Kotylla, He had a daughter, Krystyna (1937-1988), married surname Kabzińską, a doctor, who worked in the Śniadecki Infectious Diseases Hospital in Częstochowa. In 1969, she qualified to specialise in industrial medicine and, in 1973, in infectious diseases.

Kulczykowski, Żydzi – studenci UJ, p. 696; Wyględowski, Almanach lekarzy, p. 152 (re: daughter). – “Nasz Świat” 1958, No. 1, p. 17; – Dodatek do spisu abonentów sieci telefonicznych 1935, p. 3. – APCz, records of the City of Częstochow 27/4, vol. I, p. 3076; – USC Częstochowa, deathrecord No. 1387/1947. – Materials, including reports from grandson Stanisław Kabziński in the ODDC collections.

Juliusz Sętowski